The Financier says: The striking feature of the official statement of the New York associated banks last week was the reduction of $10,460,120 in loans. This was mostly in part due to the calling in of loans by some of the banks, which desired thereby to rectify their position as regards reserves, but it was probably largely caused by the cancellation by borrowers of large syndicate loans, which had been recently negotiated, and which have tended materially to increase the loan account of the banks in recent weeks. The Financier says: The striking eature of the official statement of

Mortensen Will Appear in the District Court Tomorrow.

The question of whether or not Peter Mortensen, convicted of the murder of James R. Hay, will have another trial for his life, will probably be settled in the district court tomorrow morning. The arguments on the motion for a court with rith the beauty at that in the set of the new trial will be heard at that time, and a strong fight will be made by the attorneys for the defense for a new trial. The attorneys on the other side are prepared to fight the motion to the bitter end, and the general impression among the officers is that the motion will be denied, and the prisoner motion will be denied, and the prisoner sentenced to pay the penalty for his Ever since the motion for a new trial Ever since the motion for a new trial was filed before the court, stenographers have been making a transcript of the testimony in the first hearing. This has been completed, and it is the second largest transcript ever made in Utah, the transcript in the Nick Haworth case being the largest. The Mortensen transcript covers 1,064 pages, and cost for the transcription alone $319.20. It contains the evidence of $319.20. It contains the evidence of forty-six witnesses for the state and four for the defense. The arguments for a new trial are the arguments for a new trial are based upon alleged errors in the first hearing, and Peter Mortensen is confident that he will be given another chance to prove his innocence, which he says he can do. According to the statements of the officers who have had care of him since his confinement, the prisoner has evidenced unmistakable signs of newworkness for the past able signs of nerwousness for the past able signs of nerwousness for the past few days, and does not seem to be as cheerful as he was a while back.

Mortensen is apparently in as good health as ever, but his aged father has been sick ever since the trial, and has been confined to his bed a great portion of the time. He states that he proposes to remain here until the case is finally settled. ### Mrs. M. W. Dye Takes an Overdose of Ether For Insomnia.

An overdose of ether, taken for the purpose of inducing sleep, almost resulted in the death of Mrs. M. W. Dye, who lives in the Continental rooming house, early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Dye had been unable to sleeper for several days, and, growing desperate in her endeavors to avoid wake ate in her endeavors to avoid wakeful nights, purchased a quantity of ether, which, she had been told, would be sure to bring sleep. She swallowed a large amount of the drug and retired. She was found early yesterday morning by her husband in an unconscious condition, and all efforts to arouse her were futile. A physician was at once were futile. A physician was at once summoned, and after an hour's labor summoned, and after an hours labor she was amoused from her dangerous sleep. It could not be determined how much of the drug had been taken, but the amount was sufficient to have resulted in death in a short while, but for the timely arrival of her husband and the physician.

Mrs. Dye denies that the drug was taken with any intention other than to induce sleep, and her friends and rel-atives also deny any other assertions.

Feeding the Stock.

(Holman F. Day in August Everybody's Magazine.) (Holman F. Day in August Everybody's Magazine.)

The old New England stock farmers believe in "feeding well." That is a chore that comes first of all. So Farmer Jones sets his lantern on a beam, pushes torkful after forkful of rustling hay into the mangers, and pours the sweet-dusted meal and cracked corn before the drooling creatures that are snorting and scuffling in hungry anticipation. Then he sits down in the dusky linter, brow against the warm flank of a cow, and drums steaming criss-cross streams into the pail that mother keeps so spotlessly shining. A farmer who enjoys the companionship and comfort of his beasts can get plenty of comfort for himself out of the contented riot of teeth along the rows of the stanchions, as he sits there and milks. There's something in the sound that gives him a relish for his own breakfast that mother is setting on the table—fried ham and warmed-over biscuit and steaming coffee.
